Pursuing My Ex-Wife Isn't Easy Chapter 1899 - 1992

Chapter 1899 Bonnie took the paper from him, frowning.

It was clearly written there that Roanne had spent the first ten years of her life at Love and Kindness Children's Home, but...

Bonnie could not recall anything about her at all.

There was a photo of a young Roanne included with the paper, but even after staring at it, Bonnie could not recognize this girl.

She fell deep into her thoughts for a long time, until eventually, her head started to hurt from all the concentration. Even then, alas, she could not recall whether she had met Roanne before.

Truth be told, she had only a vague memory of her childhood life.

The accident she had suffered six years ago not only wiped her memory of her child but also caused almost irreparable damage to her brain.

Even though she had regained her memories of everything that happened before the accident six years ago, she still could not remember anything about her childhood.

The only thing she remembered was that she had met an older boy at the orphanage, who promised her that he would come back for her and bring her out of the orphanage as soon as he grew up.

He even said that her favorite color, red, was a color of excitement, grandeur, and success, among other things. Because of this, he would let her put on a red gown when they got married in the future.

At that time, Bonnie had no concept of weddings and marriage, and the only thing she knew was that brides would wear beautiful white dresses for their weddings.

Therefore, when she first heard him say this, Bonnie had thrown a tantrum, saying that she wanted a red dress for her wedding instead.

The boy was both amused and exasperated by this, and in the end, he had no choice but to promise her that yes, she would be able to wear a beautiful dress for her wedding and not only that, but she could wear it in her favorite color.

This was the first time Bonnie had found out that dresses could be made in any color she wanted, including red.

After she grew up, Bonnie saw for the first time what a red wedding dress looked like, but she had never seen anyone wear it for their wedding.

As soon as she thought of this, Bonnie could not help letting out a self-deprecating snicker.

She was indeed built differently from other people.

She could not even remember the face of the boy who promised to marry her, yet she could recall every word he had said to her.

"It's okay if you can't remember her." Theo pursed his lips, seeing how frustrated Bonnie was at being unable to recall Roanne. He quickly took the paper away from Bonnie and added, "I wasn't trying to force you to remember her; it's just that..."

He let out a somewhat embarrassed laugh. "When I flipped through these pages that Joshua had given me this morning, the orphanage's name had stuck with me, and when you told me you had grown up in the same orphanage, I thought you might be able to remember Roanne."

With that, he gently patted Bonnie's shoulder in reassurance. "Don't be too hard on yourself." Bonnie curled her lips into a smile and shot him a helpless look. "I think maybe, just as you said, I might've known Charlotte and Roanne when I was a kid, but I don't remember what they used to look like anymore. On top of that, their names are different from what I'm used to."

She remembered that none of the children at the orphanage had proper names.

She was dubbed Number-9, and at that time, she was good friends with a little girl called Number-12.

As for the rest, she could not remember.

“Have you liked red since you were young?” All of a sudden, a male voice rang out from the door.

Both Bonnie and Theo lifted their heads in unison.

Joshua was leaning against the door elegantly, holding a cigarette lazily between his right index and middle fingers.

His dark, penetrating eyes were fixated on Bonnie as he said, “I remember Christopher telling me that Jim’s first love was a young girl at the orphanage who loved wearing red.” Joshua took a puff of his cigarette.

Chapter 1900

“I always thought only a cheerful person like you would like the color red. Never have I ever thought that someone as depressing as Charlotte would like that color, too.”

After all, red was a happy, passionate color, and Charlotte was not even close to either of these adjectives.

Joshua was not the only person who thought this; everyone else seemed to have agreed with this notion.

Christopher had even joked about this before, saying that maybe Jim had mistaken someone else as Charlotte.

Christopher had said that according to a book he had read about color psychology, a person would gravitate toward a color corresponding to their personality. This theory was backed by plenty of scientific evidence that supported it.

At that time, Joshua had not believed Christopher when he said this, and he even thought he had lost his mind after reading too many books.

How could a person's favorite color possibly represent their personality?

However, after meeting Charlotte for the first time, he finally understood why Christopher would think this way.

"Are you saying that... Jim and Charlotte met at the orphanage?" Bonnie's entire body froze when she heard this.

She lifted her head to stare at Joshua in disbelief. "How is that possible?"

Jim had been born into the wealthy and powerful Landry family, and he was treated like a prince since he was young.

He was the son of Charles and the love of life, Lucy, and ever since Lucy died, Charles had tried desperately to make up for his mistakes by showering Jim with love.

Therefore, how could he have been sent to an orphanage?

"How is it impossible, you ask?" Joshua put out his cigarette and lifted his head to stare at Bonnie. "Jim is a loyal person, and after finding out that his father had sent Luna to an orphanage, he was so worried that he left home in search of Luna at the tender age of ten.

"However, he was so young at the time that he was mistaken for an orphan and was taken into the orphanage.

"He had been living at the orphanage for more than three months until the Landry family finally tracked him down and brought him home."

As he said this, Joshua narrowed his eyes and could not help thinking that...Bonnie and Jim might have crossed paths since a young age.

The reason Jim loved Charlotte was that she was the girl he had promised he would marry at a young age.

Bonnie, on the other hand, had been living at the same orphanage as Charlotte and Roanne.

Bonnie loved the color red.

The girl Jim was in love with was fond of the color red as well.

All the clues seemed to be pointing toward something bigger...

Bonnie bit down on her lip and stared at Joshua dazedly.

This meant that...Jim had stayed at the orphanage for only three months.

During this time, he had fallen in love with a girl who liked red, which turned out to be Charlotte, and had found her and taken her away from the orphanage after he grew up.

However...

If Bonnie remembered correctly, the only girl at the orphanage who dressed herself in red clothes all day...was her.

Not only that, but the boy she had fallen in love with and promised to marry her...had also left after only three months at the orphanage!

As soon as she put two and two together, Bonnie felt as though her brain was about to explode.

"Does this mean that Jim..." Was he the boy she had fallen in love with?

Chapter 1901

"Was I right

Joshua curled his lips into a smirk as he watched the color drain from Bonnie's face.

He raised his brows and glanced at Luna, who was still engrossed in her reading on the sofa, "Come out for a moment."

Luna's train of thought was disrupted by Joshua. She furrowed her brows and shot him a displeased look. "I have less than an hour left!"

She had yet to finish reading through everything, so why was Joshua disturbing her?

Seeing how frustrated Luna was, Joshua curled his lips into a smirk and leaned against the doorframe elegantly. "Well, if you don't want to find out how your brother and future sister-in-law met, then suit yourself and stay inside."

Luna could not help frowning when she heard this. "Bonnie and my brother met through me, don't you remember?"

She still remembered that the first time Jim and Bonnie met was in Banyan City.

At that time, Aura had burnt down Blue Bay Villa, and when Luna and Bonnie returned to the ruins to recover her belongings, they had bumped into Jim and Harvey.

At that time, Harvey had claimed himself to be a detective who could piece together the crime scene based on clues he obtained from the ruins.

Despite knowing that Harvey was just messing around, Jim still allowed him to have fun.

This was also the time that Jim had stumbled upon a photo of Luna before her plastic surgery.

Because of this photo, he started investigating Luna's true identity, which finally led them to where they were at present.

Coincidentally, this was also the first time Bonnie and Jim met.

As the matchmaker, Luna had a clearer idea of how Bonnie and Jim had met than Joshua.

“If they had indeed met through you, why do you think I’m asking you to come out here?” Joshua curled his lips into a smirk as he strode over to Luna’s side. Then, he plucked the folder out of her hands and closed it. “You’ve been memorizing this for an hour now. it’s time to stop, or it’ll just become a jumble of words from here.”

Luna pouted slightly and glanced at the folder in his hand. “But...”

There was so much information in there that she did not manage to memorize all of them to heart.

She was worried that she showed up unprepared, she would embarrass herself in front of Charlotte and Jim.

It was one thing for her to humiliate herself, but another thing entirely if her mistake would cost her Landry Group!

“Don’t worry; you have this.” Joshua curled his lips into a smirk, pulled out a necklace from his pocket, and placed it in Luna’s palm. Luna’s eyes widened in shock when she saw what it was. “Why didn’t you give this to me earlier?”

This was the necklace that Nigel had given her when she left Banyan City.

This necklace, which was embedded with a communication device that connected her to her three children, had helped her plenty when she was in Banyan City.

However, when she was abducted by Hunter a year ago, she had accidentally left this necklace in Banyan City

It had been such a long time since she saw this necklace that she had forgotten how ingenious her son was for creating this marvelous invention!

Luna shot Joshua a dirty look as she put on the necklace. “I don’t have to worry anymore now that I have this.”

Joshua shot her a helpless glance and placed the folder on the coffee table. "I made this necklace for you based on Nigel's previous design, and it's an even better version of the one you had

"I'm guessing that Charlotte would have installed signal-blocking devices all over Landry Mansion in preparation for your arrival, so I embedded a signal-magnification feature into this pendant. This can amplify the signal coming out of your necklace, and it's virtually invincible, except if Charlotte managed to find an exceptionally skilled hacker to produce an even more powerful signal-blocking device."

Luna's entire body stiffened for a split second before a surge of warmth spread into her heart.

Joshua...had been thinking in her shoes since the beginning.

Not only that, but he had even used Nigel's previous design as a model for this new one. Luna was touched by the effort and sincerity he had put into everything he did for her.

As soon as she thought of this, Luna sniffed and stood up. Then, she walked over to Joshua and grabbed hold of his hands. "Don't worry; I will definitely try my best. Also..."

She lowered her head to gaze at his hands. "I will try my best to find out what happened to your Aunt Lucy and uncover the truth."

A surge of warmth spread through Joshua's heart when he heard this.

He reached out and pulled Luna into his embrace. "None of this is important to me right now.

"The most important thing is that if Charlotte and Jim do anything bad to you later at Landry Mansion...

"You shouldn't hold back because he's your brother. Remember, if he tries to hurt you, you have to retaliate.

"Then, you have to get out of there immediately and never get near him again."

Joshua took a whiff of Luna's fragrant-smelling hair as he hugged her. "Nothing matters more to me than your safety."

Luna nodded as she felt the reassuring warmth of Joshua's body against hers. "I will."

Not only had Jim lost his memories, but at this moment, he was entirely under Charlotte's control.

Luna was confident that Jim would not do anything to hurt her, but what about Charlotte?

Charlotte would stop at nothing to get rid of her and Bonnie!

Regardless of this, she still had to go to their meeting that afternoon.

Luna could not give up on Jim.

He did not give up on her when she was abandoned and had even gone to the orphanage to look for her himself.

Joshua and Luna remained in their embrace for a long while until, finally, Luna sniffed and lifted her head to stare at Joshua's chiseled face. "Since you already prepared a communication device for me, why did you force me to memorize that painfully long script?"

Joshua could not help curling his lips into a smirk when he saw the look on Luna's face.

He reached and gently pinched Luna's nose. "I've already said that this device is indestructible unless an exceptionally skilled hacker is present to create an even better signal-blocking device, but what if, worst comes to worst. Charlotte what if, worst comes to worst, Charlotte had indeed employed a hacker to do this?

"It's better to be safe than sorry, isn't it?"

Luna bit her lip when she heard this. "Oh... I thought that..."

"What did you think?" Joshua lifted her chin, forcing her to stare straight into his eyes. "Did you think I did this on purpose to trick you into memorizing that script?"

Luna chewed her bottom lip gently and lowered her head but did not reply.

Staring at her adorable demeanor, Joshua reached out to gently stroke her hair. "Luna, it has never been my intention...to make things difficult for you.

"Even though I'm not good at expressing my emotions, I -"

"Ahem!" Theo's abrupt cough broke through the amorous atmosphere in the room.

Luna quickly removed herself from Joshua's embrace and glanced at Theo and Bonnie, her face scarlet. "Joshua told me that you've found out where and when you met my brother for the first time."

Bonnie nodded. "That's one way to put it." She stared at Luna with a solemn look. "I've decided to stay in Merchant City."
